Firstly, I would like to say I am in two minds about whether I support this development. I believe it is needed and will add value to the area but the size of it is extreme and should be reduced. The area will lose it's feel which will be detrimental to the atmosphere of the place and possibly property prices.

My main concern is with the phasing of the relief road. This is a huge development and as such the infrastructure needs to be put in place FIRST. That way traffic won't cause too much of an issue and the funding won't run out which I believe hasn't even been provided from what I've heard?

We live on Picts Lane. We have a dog and a 8 month old baby with plans to have more children. The road is relatively quiet apart from rush hour. Our drive backs on to Picts Lane directly and we have to reverse onto the road. More traffic on this road could be a danger to my family and cause a huge inconvenience in coming and going to our house as well as enjoyment of living here. We moved from London to be in a more rural area and we don't want our move to now be ruined by traffic.

If there is no way the relief road can be built earlier than you need to think how to manage the traffic down Picts Lane. It is a small road that can't handle much traffic. Whether than be putting some sort of road bumps in or give way blocks in the road to put drivers off cutting through Shootacre and then Picts Lane and to slow the ones that do come down.

So as such, I oppose the expansion with it's current plans not focusing on the infrastructure.
