All housing estate roads should have a 25mph speed limit. To reduce pollution and increase safety. Relief road could be 30mph. Tree canopy should be no less than 30% cover. Any planted trees will not grow that quick and be less than the recommended amount for health, which is the absolute minimum. All planting should be native species for our wildlife. As many hedgerows as possible should be kept, not just the Black Hedge. No randomly bulldozing to make it easier for the builder, no nets! And no saying 'Oh dear, we'll just replace it with a privet hedge'. Too late, you can't replace a hundred years of growth and diversity with one species. The protection must be in place when the house plans are submitted, as on the town plan. Electric vehicle charging points (for all residential properties): Charging points should be provided for every household. By providing charging points, it would make the future residents more likely to adopt the technology. Installing the charging points during the construction phase will result in minimal cost for the developer, whereas retrofitting by the future resident will be very costly as driveways have to be dug up and electricians hired for that one specific job. Footpath and Cycling networks – These should link up with town centre amenities, transport hubs (train station and main road bus stops) and schools. There should be definite provision in the town plan. All housing should be eco-friendly/energy efficient: A decent amount of insulation, not the bare minimum. Proper triple glazing, Solar panels on every roof including schools, shops etc. Grey water recycling (last years drought meant some villages had NO water because of low pressure and over use), is essential. Also help with people on water meters to keep their costs down. Developers are notoriously neglectful of making any provision and fall back on the (poor) minimum level stated in out-dated Building Regulations. As Parliament has declared a 'climate emergency' a stated level of required provision must be included.
